ABSTRACT. Use an overhead projector [...]

1. ON VISUAL AIDES

It is very interesting that this paper make an unqualified advocacy for overhead projectors. Why is this interesting to me? I find projectors to the mode of CS research talks, however, I have recently heard social science professors (and good lecturers at that) just as directly discourage their use. If “good communication” requires a connection with the audience, can it be argued that a projector may only impede.

My number one resource on the internet, most important to my research, is Google. I use it as a jump off point for finding direct research literature and other research tools (search engines, software, etc).
